SECTION ONE: Word order (1-5)

DIRECTIONS: The following words areNOT in the proper order. When put in the right order, they make correct English sentences. From the given alternatives, choose the one that is correct and blacken the letter of your choice in the separate answer sheet provided.

'How to perform'

- This section deals with putting words in the right order. When words are disordered, they are called jumbled words whichdon't have a meaningful sense. Therefore, to identity the right order of words, we should first know what kind of the sentence it is. Because all types of sentences have their own order of pattern. For example, an affirmative sentence always begins with subject→verb →object/ complement→adverb;a negative sentence always begins with subject→auxiliary verb→object→adverb; an interrogative sentence always begins with auxiliary verbs /WH-words→sub/verb→object; an imperative sentence always begins with main verb → (object) or alone, and an auxiliary verb + not + main verb (don't + main verb);an exclamatory sentence always begins with WH-words (what, how) + adjective + noun
- Unlessyou fail to follow these facts, youcan't make a clear and meaningful sentence because a group of disordered words don't make any meaningful sense with a sentence.
- Furthermore,a statement ends in full stop, an interrogative sentence ends in question mark, an imperative sentence ends in full stop and sometimes in exclamation mark (!) if it is a strong feeing/order (like: come on! Go from my sight!) and an exclamatory sentence ends in an exclamation mark although it begin with WH – Word.

1. many got you how sisters have?
   A. How many got sisters you have?
   B. How many you have sisters got?

B. worrying D. thrilling

Telegram: https://t.me/Extremeseries

➢Clues

This question about how to use adjective participle

Adjective participle are verb to be (is/am/are; was/were + v –ing)

Eg. The lecture was boring, so I fell a sleep

It is a boring day, I won't go out

a boring party (= which makes somebody bored)

a boring holiday (= which Makes somebody feel bored)

* Since the second sentence conveys a positive idea (that the speaker enjoyed with his/her holiday…), nothing was boring i.e. everything was exciting/pleasing.

➢Answer: A

58.I haven't seen it, but I could imagine that the Renaissance Dam is _____ than other dams we have in the country.

A. very bigger
B. absolutely bigger
C. much bigger
D. more bigger

➢Clues

- This question is about a comparative degree – modification of comparatives. We can use intensifiers (very, tall, too cold, quite hot, very big, etc) to modify adjectives. But we can't use these intensifiers with comparative degree. Instead we use a bit, much far, even, a lot, a little, etc. before comparative adjectives

- Compare

It is more colder todaythan it was yesterday (wrong)
It is much/far/a little colder than it was yesterday (correct)
Houses are much/far/ a lot more expensive these days
There have been many more/may fewer burglaries this year

- Don't say: This building is very/too/quitebigger than that one
- Say: This building is much/far/a lotbigger thanthat one
- But we can say: This building is very big /quit big/ too big….
  - That building is less big (not bigger) than this one
- The word absolutely is intensifier used before extreme adjective to emphasize it (gradable adjective)

Eg. Big is a base adjective, and its extreme adjective is gigantic/huge (= extremely big)

NB: Absolutely can't be used before base adjectives like big

- So we can't say absolutely bigger

➢Answer: C

59. Has the plane landed _____? People are waiting outside to welcome him.

A. now
B. still
C. yet
D. till now

➢Clues

➢ What are people waiting outside? ~ Plane. But the plane hasn't landed. Therefore, which adverb of time would fit the question, then? Yet. Yet is always used with present perfect expressing a negative sense.

Has the plane landed yet? Means Hasn't the plane landed Yet?

Eg. Have they arrived Yet? = Haven't they arrived Yet?

'Yet' Express that somethinghasn't happened up to the present time

⇒ (see present perfect and adverbs of time)

➢ Answer: C

60. We have lived in this area since childhood but we_____ seen anything like that before.

A. have never
B. haven't never
C. have ever
D. haven't ever

➢Clues

This question is also about present perfect with have + never + $v^3$.

Eg. I have read five series books, but this is the most saddening story I have never read before

(Never = not at any time)
(ever = at any time)

- This is the most comfortable area that we have ever beenin
- So the speaker is now exaggerating the new area than the area where he/she has been living before.

➢Answer: A

- NB: We don't use any other negative structure/word with never.

We rather use it with affirmative word
I haven't never seen him since his childhood (wrong)
I have never seen him since his childhood (correct)

61. I hope we _____ our tenth round by June. We have already done seven now.

A. have completed

SECTION THERE: Reading Comprehension (9 – 22)

DIRECTION: Read the following passages carefully and answer the questions according to the information therein, each question has four choice, A – D. Choose the best alternative and blacken the letter of your choice in the separate answer sheet provide.

PASSAGE 1

1. The middle school years (grades 7 and 8) are known to be the thought years. These are the years when the uneven pace of girls' and boys' physical, emotional, and cognitive development is most noticeable. Girls are ahead of boys on all counts and both suffer. Educators debate whether separating boys and girls during these difficult years might improve students' academic performance. Separate classes are now prohibited in public schools that receive federal funds, but a change in the federal law that prohibits them is under consideration. Although some parents and educators oppose same – sex classes, there is some evidence that separating boys and girls in middle school yields positive results.
2. Opponents of single-sex education claim that test scores of students in all-girls or all-boys classes are no higher than those of students in mixed classes. However, the research is inconclusive. Despite the fact that some research shows no improvement in test scores. Other research shows exactly opposite results. More important, many psychologists believe that test scores are the wrong measuring sticks. They believe that self-confidence and self-esteem issues are more important than test scores. In same-sex classes, girls report increased confidence and improved attitudes toward math and science, for example. These are results that cannot be calculated by a test but that will help adolescents become successful adults long after the difficult years of middle school are past.

3. New York University professor Carol Gilligan is certain that girls are more likely to be creative thinkers and risk-takers as adults if educated apart from boys in middle school. Boys, too, gain confidence when they do not have to compete with girls. Boys at this age become angry and fight back in middle school because they feel inferior when compared to girls, who literally "out-think" them. With no girls in the classroom, they are more at ease with themselves and more receptive to learning.
4. Opponents also maintain that separate classes or separate schools send the message that males and females cannot work together. They say that when students go into the work force, they will have to work side-by-side with the opposite sex, and attending all-girls or all-boys schools denies them the opportunity to learn how to do so. However, such an argument completely ignores that fact that children constantly interact with members of the opposite sex outside school. From playing and squabbling with siblings to negotiating allowances, chores, and privileges with their opposite-sex parent, children learn and practice on daily basis the skills they will need in their suture works place.
5. The final argument advanced by opponents of same-sex education is that it is discriminatory and, therefore, unconstitutional. However, research supports exactly the opposite conclusion: that discrimination is widespread in mixed classes. Several studies have shown that boys dominate discussions and received more attention than girls and that teachers call on boys more often than they call on girls, even when girls raise their hand. Clearly, this is discriminatory.
6. It should be evident that the arguments against same-sex classes are not valid. On the contrary, many people involved in middle-school education say that same-sex classes provide a better learning environment. Boys and girls pay less attention to each other and more attention to their schoolwork. Girls are more relaxed and ask more questions. They are also less disruptive and more focused. Girls are less fearful of making mistakes and asking questions in math and science. Boys, on the other hand, are less inhibited about sharing their ideas in language and literature. Furthermore, schoolchildren are not disadvantaged by lack of content with the opposite sex because they have many opportunities outside the school setting to interact with one another. Finally, discrimination occurs in mixed classes, so discrimination is not a valid argument. Therefore, in my opinion, the law prohibiting same-sex classes in public schools should be changed.

PASSAGE II

1. In this era of the global community, more and more of us enjoy discussing different philosophies. Presently, there are as many different philosophies as there are cultures. One philosophic – type topic of unending interest is the question of whether or not animals have souls. Of course, most organized religions and philosophies have opinions on this question. One way to maintain your balance when discussing it is to keep an open mind and heart. You never know when a new viewpoint will change your thoughts around. Or at least, listening allows you to understand someone else's perspective.
2. A different approach to the question of whether or not animals have souls is found in the philosophy of Taoism: a Chinese belief system which includes the concepts of the yin and the *yang*energies. Taosim holds that embracing the natural flow of these energies, balanced and open to the path of life, creates harmony. Instead of making a definite statement, about the existence of animal souls, the may of Tao would look to the natural world for instruction.

3. There is a story in the writings of Chunga Tzu, a spiritual leader in the China, called "The joy of Fishes" which begins with two men walking along a river, where they see fish leaping in the water. One of the men remarks on the happiness of the fish. The other man asks how, since the speaker is not a fish. He can know the fish are happy. The first man answers the way: " I know the joy of fishes in the river through my own joy, as I walk along the same river". The concepts is that all beings truly share the walk along life's river experiencing the same kinds of joys and sorrows even though they are different beings.
4. A tale from the city of Edinburgh in Scotland, for example, illuminates this idea. Long ago in the 1850s, a little dog. Bobby by name, devoted himself to guarding the final resting place of his master – this was a grave in Greyfriars Kirk graveyard. This he did for 14 years. The people of the city, likewise, noticed the dog's devoted and felt a connection with the loss and sorrow the dog experienced. They recognized the sorrow that comes to us all.
5. In the happier days of Bobby's life, he belonged to John grey a policeman in the city of Edinburgh. Bobby, a Skye terrier, was Jock's steady companion in the city walking up and down the cobbled streets or standing at the policeman's post. Together, they braved the infamous Scottish weather, which was often damp and freezing.

i. Oprah Winfry is though of as the "Queen of Talk" since the mid-1980s. She is the first African American woman to host a national weekday talk show. In addition, Oprah is one of the richest and most powerful African American women in America. Her life story makes her success notable.

ii. Oprah was born on January 29,1954 on a farm in Kosciusko, Mississippi. She is the product of a brief meeting between a 20-year old Vernon Winfrey and an 18-year-old Vernita Lee. Winfrey was in the service when Oprah was born. Winfrey, apparently, learned of Oprah's birth when he received a printed baby announcement in the mail with a scribbled note. "Send clothes!" Vernita, Oprah's mother, left Mississippi soon after the birth of Oprah, leaving her young child with her maternal grandparents. Oprah stayed at her grandparents' place until she was six years old.

iii. As a young child, Oprah was raised on the farm in the rural tradition, receiving whippings and harsh chastisement as punishment for wrong doing. At the age of six, she moved to Milwaukee to live with her mother, who was working as a housecleaner. Rarely at home because of her work demands, Vernita had a difficult time providing for the emotional needs of the intelligent, high-spirited Oprah.

iv. Several sources have relayed the creative ways Oprah tried to get her mother's attention. Once, her mother refused to buy her a new pair of eyeglasses-claiming that she couldn't afford it. Oprah then staged a fake burglary at her home. She said that she had been knocked unconscious, and during the ordeal her glasses had broken. another time, the ran away from home. While on the street, she approached Aretha Franklin's limousine and convinced the singer that she was an abandoned child. Franklin is said to have given her $100. Oprah's last antic involved her frantic attempt to keep a broken puppy. She created a tale about the brave puppy fending off robbers. She even added a bit of realism to the "scene" by tossing her mother's jewelry out of the window.

v. At the age of nine, and for several years thereafter, Oprah was sexually abused by a teenaged cousin and they by other relatives and friends. She spoke openly about this on her talk show in 1991. At the time, she offered support and showed empathy to guests and viewers who had gone through similar painful experiences. In an article for Essence, she admitted that she couldn't free herself of the shame she felt until 1990, when she finally admitted, I was not responsible for the abuse." the molestation Oprah experienced in Milwaukee ended when, at the age of 14, she went to live with her father in Nashville.

vi. While under the care of her father, she flourished and honed many of her communication sills. Oprah's life under her father's care was purposeful and disciplined. Because of this, she credits her father and the time she spent with him and his wife Zelma. She often likes to say her father 'saved' her life. In an interview for Washington Post magazine, she told Jill Nelson that if she hadn't been sent to her father, she would have gone in another direction.

vii. In January 1984, Oprah took over the ailing television talk shown AM Chicago. She instantly turned in into a smash hit. Her earthy and down-home style won her large audiences. in September of 1986, the Oprah Winfrey Show made its national debut. Within five months, it was the third-highest-rated show on television behind the game shows of Wheel of Fortune and Jeopardy. In the same year her show reached between 9 and 10 million people in 192 cities on daily basis. Since then, Oprah and her show have received many Daytime Emmy awards.

viii. Oprah's talent and energy have brought her success in other areas as well. For example, she is a successful publisher. In 2001, Book magazine named Oprah among the ten powerful people in publishing.

Section Three: Reading Comprehension (8 – 25)

Directions: Read the following passages carefully and answer the questions 8 – 25 according to the information therein. Each question has four choices, A – D.

PASSAGE I

1. The state of the environment in the later part of the 21st century will be determined largely by one factor: human population. If the species doubles its number by 2050 to nearly 11 billion, humanity may complete the devastation that has been accelerating over the last few decades. Such unabated expansion would continue to soak up the world's capital and prevent the poorer nations from making the necessary investments that might deter continued pulsation growth.

2. If the worst occurs, countless millions become environmental refugees, swamping the nations that tried to conserve their soil, water and forests. The great – grand – children of today's young people would have to share the planet with only a ragged cohort of the adaptable species dominated by rats, cockroaches, weeds, microbes. The world in which they survived would consist largely of deserts, patches of tropical forests, eroded mountains, barren oceans, all buffeted by extremes of weather.

3. The best hope for humanity and other life-forms would be to cut human propagation in half, so that the world's number would not exceed 8 billion by mid – century. The only event in which the earth would achieve zero population growth or even shrinkage would be some environmental or social catastrophe. Donella Meadows, systems analyst, contends that the huge run – up in human numbers has foreclosed most options and shortened the amount of time available to come to grips with rising threats to the environment. In the past, Meadows argues, there were always new frontiers for exploding population as well as for empty lands to accept wastes. This is no longer true. Most suitable areas have been colonized. Many easy – to – find resources are already being exploited. Most dumping grounds have also filled up. Meadows believes that much work is waiting ahead to make the world look better than it does now.

4. For centuries humanity has confounded doomsayers by finding new supplies of food and energy. In the early 1970s some environmentalists interpreted temporary rises in food and oil prices to mean mankind was again pushing the Julian Simon, revealed a basic problem with the limits – to – growth argument. Price rises caused by scarcities will always stimulate human ingenuity to improve efficiency and find new resources.

5. In the intervening years, however, there has been evidence that the market often fails to react as quickly as problems demand. In addition, market forces often work perversely to hasten the demise of species and resources. The increasing appetite for Bluefin tuna among sushi lovers and health – conscious diners has vastly increased the market price of the fish. Instead of dampening demand, the principal effect came to be extended fishing. This led to a marked decrease in the number of fish in the Atlantic.

6. Demographers refer to such collisions between rising demand and diminishing resources as "train wrecks". As the world adds new billions of people in even shorter periods, such potential conflicts happen almost everywhere. With most of the World's good land already under the plow, a population of 11 billion human beings would probably have to make do with less than half the arable land per capita that exists today. That would set the stage for disaster, as farmers stripped nutrients from the soil, exacerbated erosion and gobbled up water and wild lands.

7. If population keeps building at the current rate, the most ominous effect is that millions of life – forms become extinct. Humans, no matter how we behaved, cannot help crowding out natural systems. A survey of 50 countries by environmental researchers showed that habitat loss, the most important factor leading to extinction, rises in direct proportion to the density of the individuals that make up various species. Big animals often range over hundreds of square miles and increasingly collide with settlements. Smaller species, which make up most of nature's diversity, are badly affected by human activities in countless ways.

8. The crucial question is whether humankind can afford to exterminate large numbers of other species without ruining the ecosystems that also sustain us. Whether or not humankind can afford to do this is unknown. However, reducing the burden placed on the earth by rising human numbers and the lifestyle of rich nations may have a promising end. To achieve this, the affluent nations must move their economies toward patterns of production and consumption that recognize the limits of what the earth can provide and what wastes it can accommodate. The poorer nations, on the other hand, require better education and improved family planning to stabilize their numbers. Adopting coercive measures to stabilize their family is also among the alternative available to the poorer nations.

Adapted from: More Reading Power (1996): Addison – Wesley Publishing Company

8. Which of the following has the potential to turn millions into environmental refugees?
   A. Allowing unchecked growth of human population.
   B. Conserving soil, water and forests.
   C. Changing the patterns of production and consumption.
   D. Enabling the poor nations to slow down population growth.

Answer: A

9. From the following sentences, identify one potential consequence if population growth continues at the current rate.
   A. There will be large number of new supplies of food and energy.
   B. Humankind will be able to reduce the burden placed on the earth.

Answer: D

PASSAGE II

When a company invests in a country, it asks: Do we have the right people with the right capabilities? This makes people think of new facilities, new jobs. Too often they forget the importance of developing new skills.

Most educational systems – in both developed and poorer markets – are unprepared for the future skills challenge brought on by digitalization. As a business, we would throw up our hands and do nothing. But as optimists, we should instead double down on being part of the solution. Focusing on training and 'up skilling' when the shovels go in the ground after an initial investment can lead to even more jobs over time. In established facilities, workers displaced by technology can learn to operate robots and become comfortable with automation. Business can develop work study programs based on company tailored study programs based on company study programs based on company tailored curricula or provide essential machines to universities or vocational programs so that students can learn to use them. I know this is possible – not because I am an optimist but because I see it happening.

In this light, the goals of private companies and the public are the same: a business supports those whose jobs are impacted by technology. It betters the training of those in developing markets. It creates loyal relationships with talent and pipeline of resilient workers with flexible skills – ones that it and other companies will demand. Most jobs are created. And everybody wins.

Source: John Rice, Vice Chairman of GE, TIME Dec. 12, 2016
